Mr. Brown was a happy friendly man who always took the time to visit while taking his many walks around the neighborhood. My husband (Ben Willard) grew up with his presence as another father figure. Then later when our sons (Isaiah and Ryan Willard) were born Mr. Brown was a grandfather figure to them. They took walks together, chatted about wood carving and things boys like to do. Mr. Brown even made a tool for Isaiah to whittle wood. Mr. Brown was a special man to many people, a man who made a positive difference in our lives. We ask that God be with the Brown family bringing peace and healing with the memories of how special he was to them and those lives he touched.. with loving sympathy, The Willard family

Mr. Brown was our long time neighbor. He lived in the neighborhood before my father moved in the 70's. There were many stories about Dr. Raheb's pony eating Mr. Brown's corn. Also about how during the flood of '76 Mr. Brown coming down in his boat to help my father with the animals. Mr. Brown was a good neighbor to myself, my husband and my son when we moved into the house. He was always inviting them to bowl. He will certainly be missed.
