I knew him only as a customer, always pleasant and amicable. So sad that he thought so little of life. Peace is something that we seek, maybe now he finally found it. Who knows? So sorry, I know how much it hurts. I take solace in the notion that what's gone from this mortal life, our souls are finally at peace and rest; just believe, maybe even selfish.

Marc, It is 3 weeks ago today that you left us. I miss you every minute of every day. I am trying to be strong. Someone told me yesterday to tell myself that you are on vacation and I will see you soon. I know I will see you again Marc. I am no longer afraid to die. The last time we were together we hugged and told each other we loved each other. Something that we never forgot to say even when we just talked on the phone. So, today and everyday I am giving you a hug and telling you I love you. Xoxoxox

May you rest in peace Marc.. My deepest condolences to you all in this time. I will never forget visiting Uncle Ray and Aunt Ellie during a trip to see my Dad. Auntie Claire was there making the meatballs that we love so much. Marc and I were eating them as quickly as she could cook them. She scolded us telling us that if we didn't stop there wouldn't be any for everyone else. In the years to come every time I have those meatballs I'll think of that moment and a smile will come to my face. Marc is with those people such as Auntie Claire and Uncle Ray probably eating all the meatballs without me (smile). May he watch over all of you from above and may all the memories that you have bring you peace.

Paul and Diane, our minds are filled with sorrow in the loss of Marc. The relentless vision of Marc walking through our front door to see Keith and Bryan will not go away. The loss and the grief must be indescribable for you. That said, the thought that refuses to leave us is of Marc in heaven and the multitude of qualities he possessed; it is his sense of humor and that warm smile that is indelibly printed in our hearts. Some one once told us to hold your friends close and whisper in their ear. Tell them you love them very much and you will always hold them dear. We only wish we could have whispered in Marc's ear before he left us. May God give you the strength to carry on during this most difficult time.

To Paul, Diane, family, Kristen, friends ... That big smile of Marc's is bigger than we could ever imagine, now that he is walking on streets of Gold in such peace that we can never know until we, too, are walking beside God.
