Marky Mark, I am not sure I will ever accept this tragic loss to the world or if there will ever be a day, for the rest of my life, that I do not think of you. I have enjoyed spending so much time with you over the last year & getting to know you, and God knows my appreciation for you (work wise) runs deeper than you could have ever imagined, you truly were that perfect addition to our work family. I had come to realize what an amazing young man you are....so polite, respectful, well mannered, and intelligent. Your mind was bright, from politics, to religion, to basic stuff, we talked about it all & you seemed so level headed about so many things. I also admired & respected your strong work ethic, that is very rare in people your age these days & it was a breath of fresh air for me. I already miss our daily chats & cutting up w/ you, I LOVED to hear & watch you laugh. I loved how you got just as excited about all my travel adventures as I do & that you wanted to start your own adventures (I was looking so forward your life adventures, heck I had already started planning a couple for you). I have gone over every conversation I can possibly remember, a million times & I can't seem to figure out how I missed the pain you must have been feeling, but I would give anything on this earth, if I had just known & could have helped you, to bring you back is my biggest wish!! I honestly don't know what you were battling or the level of loneliness you may have felt deep down, but I hope you are in peace now sweet young man aka Clark Kent (inside joke). I hope you are looking down & see all the love that actually surrounded you everyday & how many people wanted to be around you & a part of your life. You may not have realized it, but you truly made a positive impact on everyone around you & you will be missed deeper than any words can express....this world needed MORE people like you, certainly not less!! Love always & one last time.....get all them dang commissions checks mailed out already :) Candy

A great time with Mark when he agreed to a day trip with his "old" crazy Aunts and Grandmom. He made the day special. Love you Mark Thomas, I know you received a wonderful reception in heaven. Aunt Dolores

Weirdly about 11-12 years ago, Rex came home from school talking about his new friend, Mark, in class. Funny thing was, he lived on Rex Street (which was a side street in our old neighborhood). Then he says his mom is a Largo FF. Another weird thing. Eventually we meet this boy and bring him into our home. We took him to Largo football games. They made it thru middle school together. Then onto high school. He was a shy, quiet kid, very sweet, soft spoken and lovely to be around. His mom worked lots, I would drive the boys to school, pick up any supplies he needed, then they started track & cross country together. I committed to driving the 2 of them, his mom would take them whenever she could, and she would show up at the meets as much as possible. I took him to Hooters for Rex's 16th, he never told his mother as she disapproved of those places. We invited him to go to the movies with us, i refused to take money, and last year he told me he used to hide a twenty in my car. Greg took the 2 of them to HHN, and Busch Gardens Halloween event. Unfortunate events happened, and he had to move away at the start of the senior year. We reconnected a year later. Max would live with him for a few months....he taught Max about fishing, they went to the Skyway Pier a few times. Our entire family embraced him as one of our own...another son/brother.
