I remember the first time I met Dick....I was just entering my teens and Dick was just leaving them. All of us so young. I remember that silly big grin of his and how sweet he was to his sister's friend. In later years, I remember listening to him talk of his job and how much he loved what he did there but more so how much he loved the people he worked with. I thought then as I do now that even with a challenging life,, he found joy.in living it. God Bless you, Dick. Here's to dancing before the throne of God.Sandy Macfarlane Nebergall
